It's hard to imagine society without secrets, where everything is open and honest and available. Humans don't seem to work that way. If we were sure of ourselves and our loves then it would not matter what others said or thought, but it does seem to matter to many. Being observed changes the way we behave and the way we see ourselves.

LOOKING AHEAD and LOOKING BACK

In the first few months of 2025 we have three collections of POETRY:

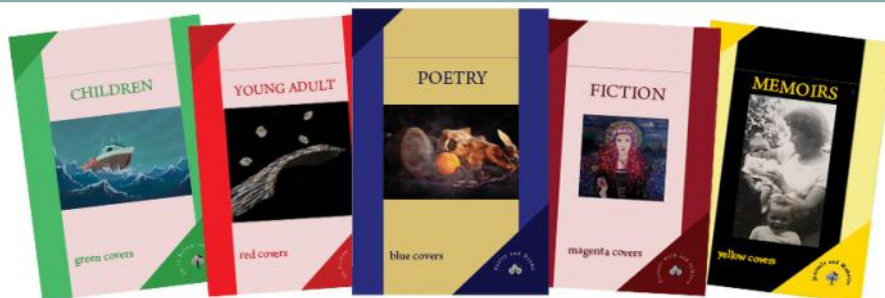

Partly Sane, Prose Merry and Rhyme by David Hogarth

Looking Back by Rhymesmiff

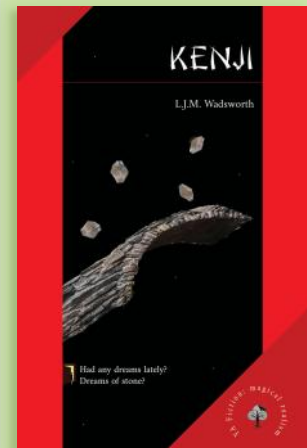

Being Human by Levi Tafari

And in July:

Tales from The Village with contributions from various Hawkwood authors
